

The Uncommon Diagnosis of Windssock Deformity for a Common Presentation

Nida Fatima Sakrani, MB BCh BAO* Hussain Ahmed, MRCS, FEBPS Isa Yusuf Al Saad, FAAP, FRCP-I
Kevin Patrick Dunne, MRCP, FRCP* Martin Corbally, FRCSI, FRCSEd, FRCS**

We report a two-year-old Indonesian female who presented with vomiting and weight loss for more than one month and was ultimately diagnosed with duodenal obstruction due to a windssock deformity. This is a rare and intrinsic congenital anomaly of the duodenum. The diagnosis as well as immediate and conclusive surgical management is discussed.